Brookhaven, from page 1

The council met later last week to complete the process but decided to send the issue to third-party mediation. That takes place today.

"The City honors its obligations," said Mayor John Ernst. "Unfortunately some of the terms of the [Garrett's] contract negotiated by previous administrations is ambiguous and does not allow the City to know what its duties are," Mayor, John Ernst said in a statement. "While working towards an orderly transition, we have become mired in conflict over the terms and conditions of that agreement. The responsible thing to do is to have a third party resolve these disputes. We wish Marie Garrett well."

Garrett, the highest paid city manager in the state at $214,000 per year, could be eligible for nine months pay, continued health and life insurance and retirement pay.

She originally came to the city as a consultant when it was incorporated and later was hired by Mayor J. Max Davis. Her original contract drew some fire when it was revealed she was to work only four days a week and was to be paid at her consultant hourly rate if asked to work on Fridays.

That contract was changed to a more conventional arrangement, but Garrett was able to command a higher salary because of the start-up nature of a new city.

Police Chief Gary Yandura is to be the interim city manager.

In other actions, the council elected Bates Mattison mayor pro-tem. He was elected to that position last year when Mayor Davis left office and was succeeded by Rebecca Williams.

The mayor also reaffirmed the employment of the city clerk and finance director.
